Description

The Weldas COMFOflex® 10-2900 welding glove is designed to deliver reliable protection, durability and enhanced thermal comfort for professional welding and industrial applications. Manufactured from high-quality grade A cowhide leather, the glove provides strong resistance to heat, sparks and abrasion, making it suitable for demanding working environments.

A key feature of the 10-2900 is its additional wool lining, which offers improved insulation. The robust leather outer layer ensures dependable protection while the reinforced stress areas increase durability in high-wear zones, extending the service life of the glove under intensive use.

KEVLAR® stitching minimizes seam burnout under thermal stress, ensuring consistent performance during prolonged welding tasks.

The 10-2900 is a dependable, high heat resistant solution for professionals seeking a durable, insulated welding glove for everyday use in both standard and cold working environments.

“We use the 10-2900 when handling larger hot components straight after welding, and the performance is excellent. The glove gives us the confidence to move heavy, hot parts safely, while the wool lining adds extra comfort during longer jobs. It’s a reliable solution for tough, high-heat handling tasks.” – Production Supervisor
